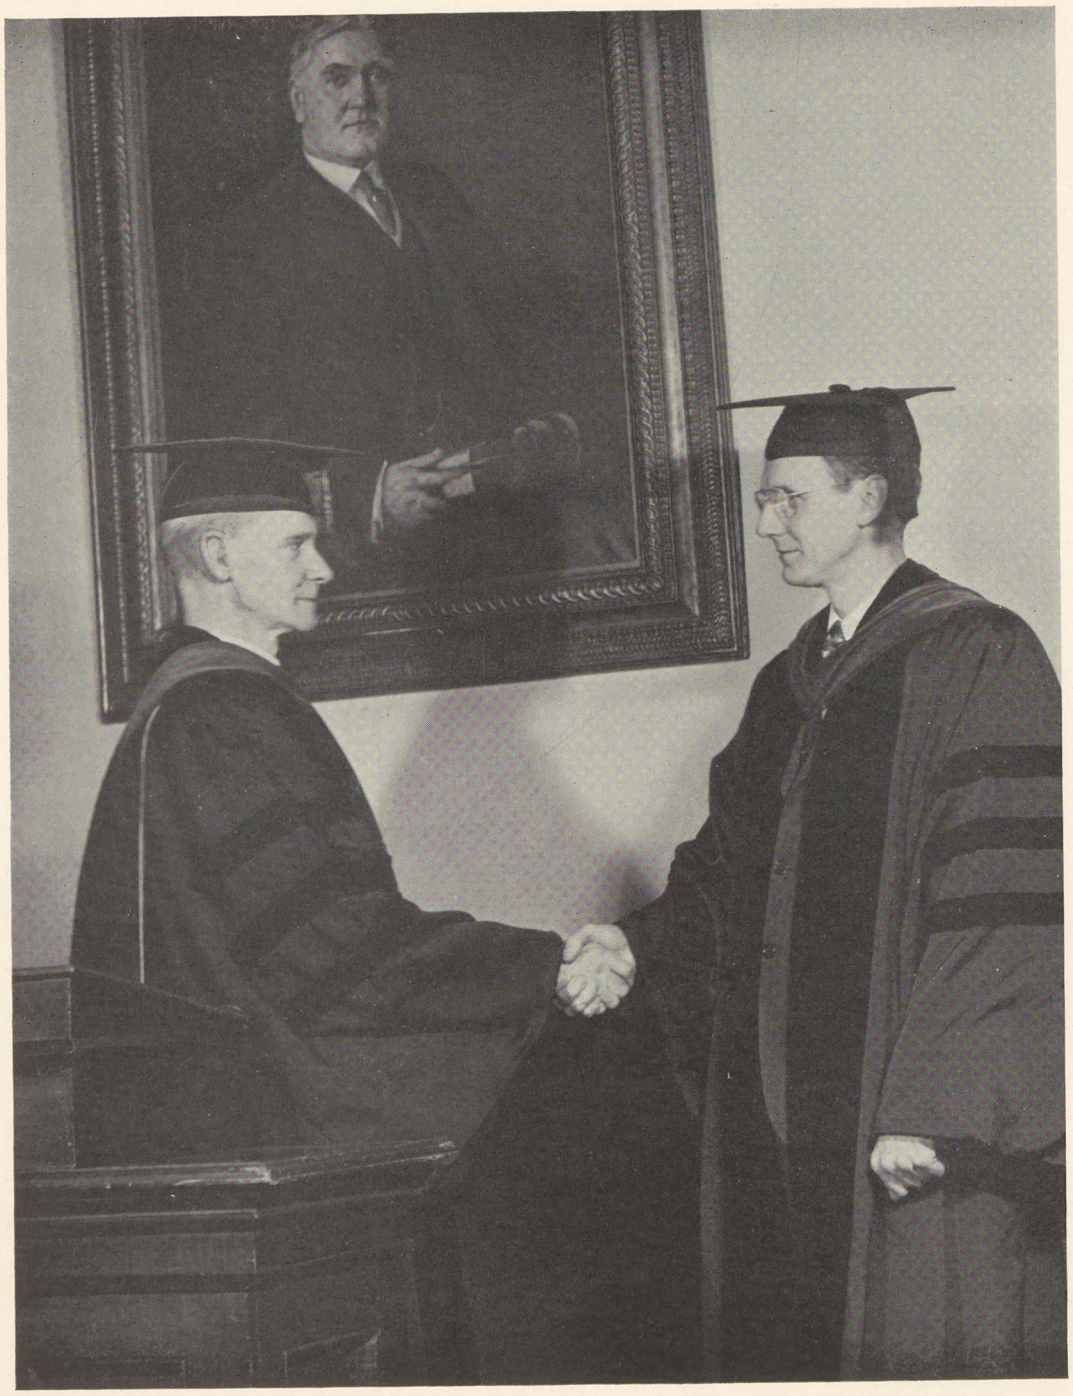
In these pages we have stopped in the very midst of a most significant experience to look about us. Certainly the occasion which this book in large measure commemorates is one whose relations are not confined to the present. Here we have been forced to reflect upon—to review—the scenes of the past. These four years of labor and love it is impossible to forget. It has been equally impossible to avoid facing the prospect of the future. The hopes presented by the opportunities that open before us have brought us to this hour. We pause as in a doorway and, ere we pass on, attempt to recapture all that other years have given us.

The past which is presented by what is recorded here is of supreme importance to our future success. If the lessons of our time teach anything it must be the absolute folly of casting away that which we have received from other times. Balanced living is difficult to attain without the stabilizing influence of the proven wisdom and firm faith of those who have seen life before us. If we are to succeed in living usefully and well the wisdom of the sages and the faith of the prophets must bound the path along which we walk.



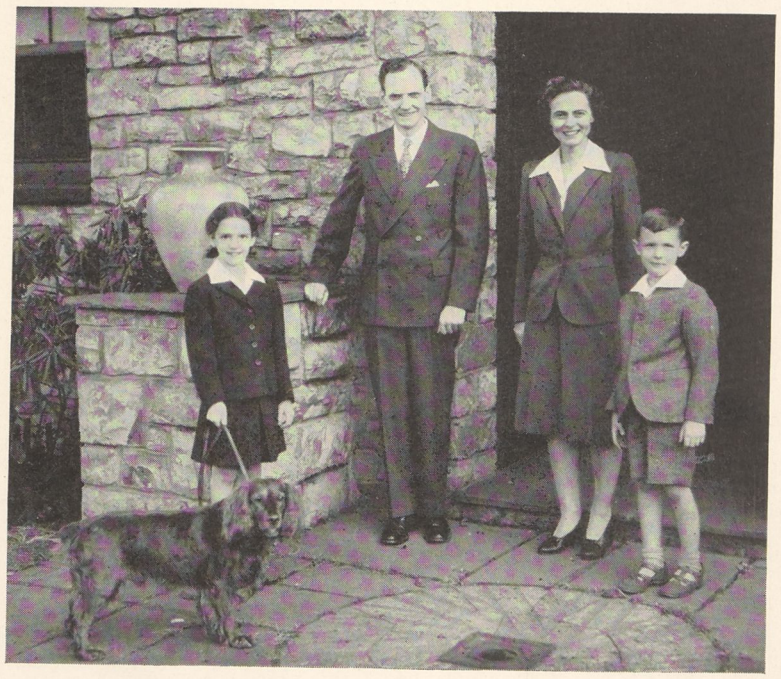
Charles Calvert Ellis, President Emeritus, A.B., A.M., D.D., B.D., Ph.D., LL.D.
Calvert N. Ellis, President, A.B., Th.B., A.M., Ph.D.

Dedication

Every college senior anticipates tomorrow with a sense of uncertainty and awe. This year, the thought of the future and its almost inevitable insecurity and disillusionment is, more than ever, overwhelming. If we are to surmount this chaos we must possess two qualities—a judicious sense of proportion and a profound spiritual faith. These ideals find expression for many of us in the life and experience of President Calvert N. Ellis. It is to him that we sincerely dedicate this book.

President Ellis fills an important place in the life of the college beyond that of his official position as its administrative head. His whole personality is a vitally stimulating force. He gives us the hope of a Juniata which can continue to develop and yet retain those ideals which are a basic part of the whole spirit of the college. He gives us faith that these principles are truly everlasting—that there can be security even in the midst of change.

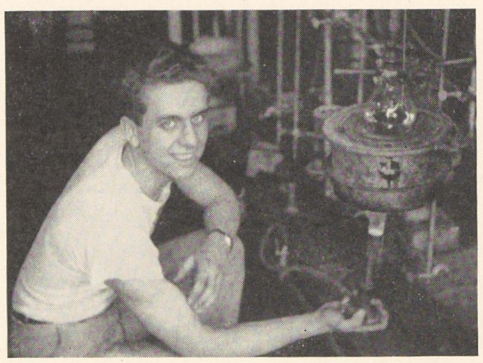
We extend our sincere regards to "Dr. Calvert" and to his family who also have won our warmest interest. We hope that the career so successfully begun will be a long and a happy one.

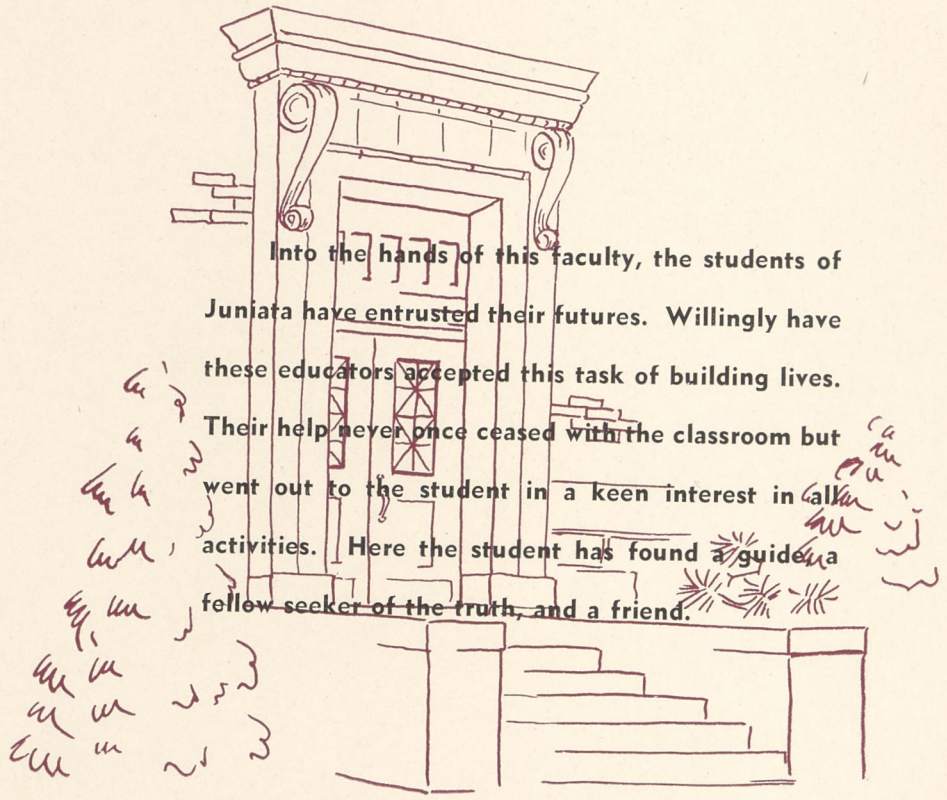


President and Mrs. Ellis, Betty Anne and David.

An eminent American has described the scholar as Man Thinking and it is an American ideal that not one, but all men be so educated and equipped as to be able to think rationally. The liberal arts college, characteristic of New World education, has as its aim the training of men of wide interests, but above all, men who can qualify as scholars—as Thinking Men.

Scholar





Into the hands of this faculty, the students of Juniata have entrusted their futures. Willingly have these educators accepted this task of building lives. Their help never once ceased with the classroom but went out to the student in a keen interest in all activities. Here the student has found a guide, a fellow seeker of the truth, and a friend.

Administration

CALVERT N. ELLIS, President

This volume contains the record of an unusual college year. There were no second sittings in the dining room; there were no long end runs on the football field, and there were three times as many women as men on the campus. This is strange for Juniata. However, the year has been outstanding in the fine cooperative spirit everyone has shown. The Senate offered constructive leadership, and the entire college community accepted its responsibility to support all phases of the college program.

The tempo of life in war-time has increased. Many students are accelerating their education, which means a curtailment of activities and less time for maturation. However, Juniata continues to offer all the necessary elements of a good education—sound learning and cultural privileges in a spiritual environment. The friends of college years will be among the truest of your life. The smaller student group made it necessary for you to participate in more activities and gave you more opportunity for leadership.

I hope that the pages of this Alfarata will bring you pleasant memories of autumn sunsets, of walking in the snow to vespers, of Thanksgiving dinner, of term papers you finished in the library, and of spring coming to the Juniata Valley. We hope this year at Juniata has helped you become a better person, better able to fill a place of responsibility in the life of our times.

These people, the faculty and our friends, have been the doorway through which we have come out of the darkness into the light. Through their efforts we have come from the complacency of ignorance into the inquiring search of the educated. The knowledge which they so freely have imparted to us has been sufficient to create within each one of us a desire to seek truth throughout life. But their help has not been all intellectual, for that would have been an incomplete education. They have been a social stimulus, encouraging and aiding in those activities of the student which have made for social development.

Many of those things which the faculty has contributed have been things which a large institution could never have attempted to give. There are so many times when students wish to talk with someone, an older and experienced person. Of course there are the deans who are always ready to listen and give aid to a student, but where else could one find an entire faculty that is always willing to drop even the most important things in order to give personal attention to the student. The barriers that ordinarily separate faculty and student they have breached by the bonds of deep friendship and understanding.

The impact of the war on the small college, its faculty and student body has been tremendous. The danger of viewing the crisis through the eyes of immaturity has been acute. In all of this the faculty has performed a most valuable service in checking undue emotion by evidencing a calm and understanding that fostered balanced and sensible living. The faculty has at all times maintained the vision of the thing for which former classmates are fighting. They are building the future, here, for those who fight on the battlefronts of the world. They are building the foundation for a rapprochement to peace through knowledge, reason and love for fellow man. Their most effective instruction has come through their example, living the kinds of lives they wish us to live. They have shown us through word and deed what the truly great values of life are.

THE PUBLIC RELATIONS OFFICE staff consists of Harold B. Brumbaugh, Assistant to the President and Alumni Secretary; Daphne G. Rudy, Assistant to the Alumni Secretary; Julia Ann Flohr, Director of Publicity; and Kathryn M. Green, Assistant Director of Admissions.

Freshmen first entering college gaze dimly through a maze of social and academic traditions, looking to upperclassmen for guidance. Sophomores, their elders by one year, have already established themselves in college life following in the footsteps of the juniors as they pursue new courses of activity.

With the culmination of college life, the degree conferred upon each senior symbolizes his key to the world that lies ahead. Full of dreams the graduate leaves behind his cherished college days and steps forward to bear the burdens of life.

Don't forget the fun the class of '47 had during the year. Good luck and the best of everything. Don't forget —

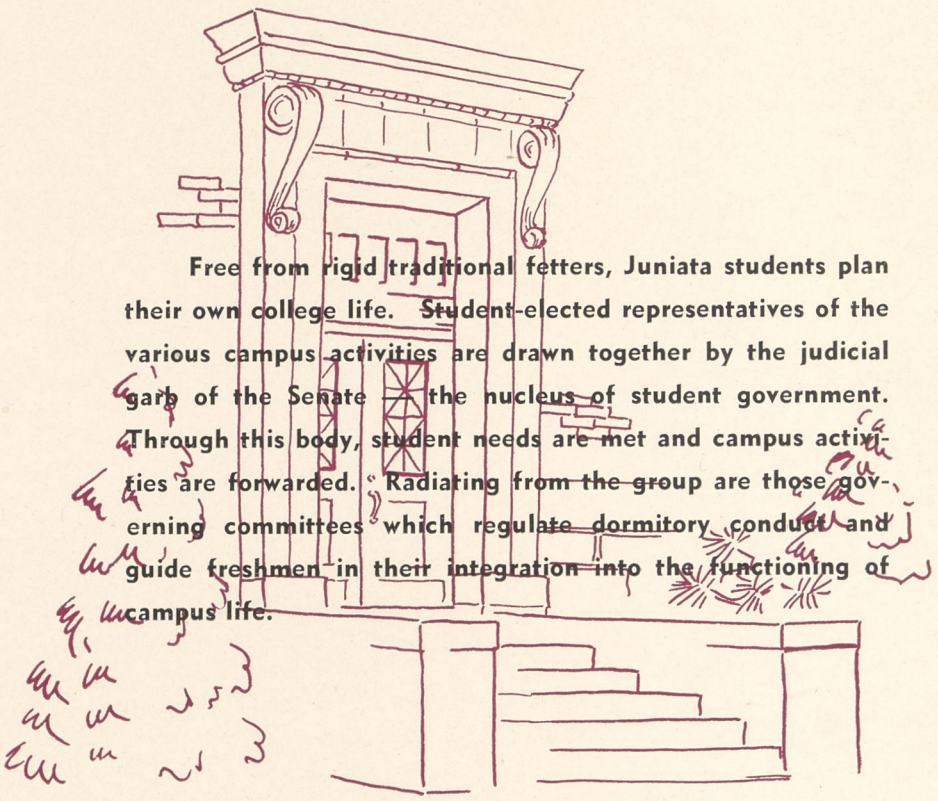
The class of '47 deserves credit for being distinctive in two ways. In the first place, it boasted more male members than the rest of the classes combined and secondly, its girls were the first to invade the sanctity of Founders and take up permanent residence there. Gone are the days (at least for the duration) of the cat-calls from Founders' front windows. Now, instead of their erstwhile rather barren look, we have evidence of a feminine touch and all the comforts of home.

Although smaller in number than preceding freshman groups, the frosh made up this deficiency by contributing wholeheartedly to all the phases of campus life. Scholastically they held their own and, though their Einsteins and Curies remain as yet undiscovered, there are still possibilities. Athletically the class made a good record for itself in basketball, both men's and women's, in field hockey, volleyball, and the various individual sports. Several of the members obtained for themselves secure places on the varsity basketball team for succeeding seasons. Socially the class made its contributions by giving a party for the school and by giving the rest of the classes keen competition for the All-Class Night cup. The class as a whole entered into all the activities with the zest and vigor that characterizes youth.

After the usual first month or so of horseplay which occasioned various calls from the Freshman Court, the class settled down to serious study. Its members came to assume the serious attitude which characterized this entire year. They seemed to be cognizant of the doors which were opening before them and determined to make the most of their chosen way.

The world is ever looking for leaders, and it will always follow the man who demonstrates his high vision and devotion to duty. The leaders on a college campus face few issues that compare in magnitude with the life-size problems of every day existence, but their campus experiences furnish a valuable proving-ground where the leaders of tomorrow's world can demonstrate their abilities.

Leader



Free from rigid traditional fetters, Juniata students plan their own college life. Student-elected representatives of the various campus activities are drawn together by the judicial garb of the Senate — the nucleus of student government. Through this body, student needs are met and campus activities are forwarded. Radiating from the group are those governing committees which regulate dormitory conduct and guide freshmen in their integration into the functioning of campus life.

The Senate of Juniata College still stands as the symbol of representative democracy as practiced on College Hill in a world in which democratic government faces its greatest trial.

Each year in the spring the student body casts ballots for the various candidates for the offices in student government. Those who receive the honor of being elected to the Senate by their fellow-students receive in like measure a great degree of responsibility. Only those students are considered for Senate positions who combine in a large measure personal integrity, mental ingenuity, wise judgment with efficient and intelligent leadership.

Each member of the Senate has a two-fold duty. It consists in each doing his particular assigned task, along with the extra jobs of varying importance in improving campus life and lending a helping hand to some worthy project in cooperation with the student body. In this respect the Senate has made several important contributions this year. It has contributed its small, though worthwhile, bit to the country's "Win the War" program through sponsoring such events as the D-Day Rally.

Another contribution of a different nature, yet greatly welcomed by the student body, was the renovation of the Juniatian room. Its aspect, changed from that of a journalistic den to a friendly repainted room, has not only been the joy of the Juniata journalists, but also of the rest of the students, for it is now also used for various social purposes.

With Uncle Sam claiming most of Juniata's young men for his armed forces, the college found itself this year with a considerable decrease in enrollment and a necessity for students to do double duty in student government activities. But all in all, the Senate this year has done a remarkable job under unusually difficult circumstances.

House Committees function primarily to integrate students to dormitory life by providing wholesome living conditions conducive to intellectual and social development. Student needs are recognized by both Men's and Women's House Committees through representatives from the various halls.

The Women's House Committee is responsible for some of the major campus activities. First of these is the fire-lighting ceremony in the fall, suggestive of an Indian ritual. Led by a procession of lithe and barefoot Indian maidens, fire is brought to light the log that first burned in the Social Rooms fireplace.

Two formal dinners, the Thanksgiving Banquet and the Valentine Banquet, were arranged by this committee. In addition, this year an informal Christmas dinner was held prior to the holidays. Dinner by candlelight featured student tables with faculty members as guests. Following dinner, Dr. C. C. Ellis read Dickens' "Christmas Carol" to the student body in the Social Rooms.

Informal examination teas provide welcome relaxation following mid-semester exams. Occasional sandwich sales are also included in the activities of this group.

This year the Men's House Committee sponsored the first all-inclusive male gathering to be held in the modern area of Juniata in the form of a pajama party in the Y club room.

Alberta,

I hope you don't have any hard feelings toward me from the beginning of the year. Please forget all the unpleasant things & remember only the pleasant ones. Keep those feet going on the organ pedals!

Freshman Court with all its problems is one of the things that upperclassmen and freshmen alike will never forget about college days. Obviously enough, freshmen remember it with pain—the Court always sees to that. Upperclassmen, especially those who had anything to do with the Court, remember it with mixed emotions, for they are in a position to judge both the pains and pleasures that accrue from its solemn sessions.

The Court is one of the major governing bodies in the student government program. Under the aegis of the senate, the Chairman of Freshmen, together with the members of the Men's and Women's Courts, attempt to help the freshmen in the adjustments they must make upon entering college. All the bizarre and garish requirements of the Court form a humorous course in "How to Get Along in College." Whether freshmen enjoy being thus trained in the social graces is hardly a question for upperclassmen to debate. Quite obviously they are prejudiced. The class of 1947 recognized the fact and, as most other freshman classes, openly questioned the Court's authority. But aside from the uneventful suppression of such heresies the job of the Court is routine. Whatever comes into the life of a freshman—flag duty, desk duty, press club duty—he owes it all to the Freshman Court.

The fact that man is restless until he rests in God is ever attested by the eternal search of man for happiness. Recognizing this, Juniata educators have sought to provide the answer to man's search in its program of religion and music. Because the Christian tradition affirms the possibility of the union of the soul with God, and because it has been the inspiration of much of the world's great music, religion and music have always loomed large in the experience of Juniatians.

Religion and Music

Orchestra personnel was limited almost to the "fairer sex" this year. The number of pieces in this musical organization was considerably smaller than in former years, though the quality of their music was maintained at the same high level.

Miss Mary Ruth Myers conducted the orchestra in its semi-weekly rehearsals and in the two annual concerts. The winter concert consisted entirely of orchestral compositions, while the concert given in the spring included several two-piano compositions.

Supplementing the performances of the regular Orchestral Society were the activities of a string trio. This trio, composed of members of the orchestra, played throughout the year at teas, dinners and various other social events of both college and community.

The Choir, adjusting itself to meet the demands of the day, included only girls this year. Practice started early in the fall, continuing regularly twice a week.

Because of uncertain transportation facilities, the choir concerts were limited to those cities closer to the college. On each trip the personnel was necessarily limited, the members alternating for the several trips.

The girls' trio was featured in these concerts and took the place of the varsity quartet of other years.

This is Juniata's first experience with an all-girl choir, but they will be adequate substitutes until such time when Juniata's A Cappella Choir will again mean a well balanced chorus of men's and women's voices.

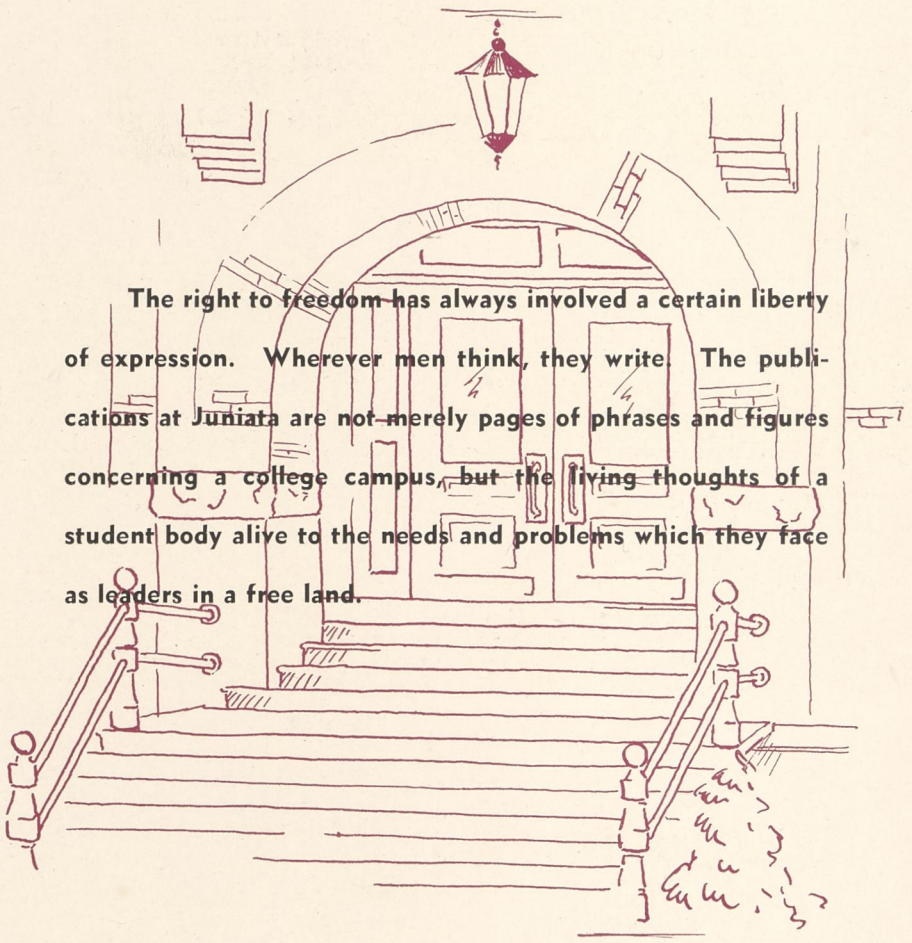
Student Volunteers is a college group organized entirely on student initiative. Enkindled by a desire to share divine experiences with fellow Christians, the youth at Juniata find fellowship in gatherings such as this organization sponsors. Vital leadership opportunities are also afforded through student planning and conducting of the services. At other times, religious leaders from off campus are invited to bring helpful messages.

As another function of this group, weekly evening prayer meetings are held in the women's and men's dormitories. Early morning prayer groups gather in the tower of the Stone Church three days a week for the strength and inspiration that comes from having started the day in fellowship with God.

Vespers at twilight. Calm autumn dusk or cool spring evenings on Round Top, or the last rays of the winter sun streaming in the tall windows of Oller Hall. Massive organ strains. These make up the setting for an experience that no Juniatian will forget. It is these Sunday evening devotional services, held six times during the school year, that serve as an excellent means of building a strong bond of fellowship among students and faculty as they worship at the college altar.

Speakers for this year's programs were Dr. Hobart D. McKeehan, and students including Raymond Day, Daniel Long, Robley Johnston, Clinton Burkett, and Rev. Harold Keen.

Success to you Alberta in your music work.
Sincerely
B-D



The right to freedom has always involved a certain liberty of expression. Wherever men think, they write. The publications at Juniata are not merely pages of phrases and figures concerning a college campus, but the living thoughts of a student body alive to the needs and problems which they face as leaders in a free land.

The Alfarata workers saw little hope at the beginning of the year with regard to an annual for 1944. But strong interest surmounted even the greatest difficulty and here is the result of tireless efforts — the twenty-sixth Juniata College annual.

No staff had been appointed until late in October when work began with a wave of unparalleled energy which continued throughout the year. It was not an easy job to produce this edition, since paper shortage and labor difficulties greatly interfered. Orders were in early, contracts were made, photography got an early start, and the book began to take actual form in the latter part of February.

The staff has tried to include not all, for that would be impossible, but most of the memories of events and activities that made this year at Juniata a happy one.

Is the safe kept memory
of a lovely thing."

Juniatian copy . . . proofs . . . galleys . . . heads and leads . . . news . . . scoop . . . ems and type . . . cuts and deadline—these are the words constantly on the tongues of the various editors, and these are the things that make up the college weekly, The Juniatian.

Despite difficulties caused by the lack of funds and labor shortage in print shops, The Juniatian was issued weekly this year as previously. The paper was reduced in size and changed further in appearance by the use of a new log and the absence of the traditional "ears." Other changes were made within the staff, the most important being the creation of a typing staff. During the year, the Editor-in-Chief took over the duties of the Managing Editor, thus decreasing the number of editors by one.

The Juniatian served a greater purpose and reached more distant and varied points this year than ever before. The readers on campus were few compared to those alumni in the armed forces located in England, India, Africa, Italy, the south-west and the many parts of the United States. To these men and women The Juniatian had most significance. Our J. C. family is scattered far and The Juniatian is the one link uniting them with the college and its activities and with each other.

Life's greatest art is learning to live, yet the world is made up of so many different realms of existence that there are only a few who learn to live in all of them. However, it is the aim of liberal education so to liberate the mind that the individual may move about freely in all realms of life, and the citizen, insofar as he assumes his place in all the activities of life and the community, embodies that ideal

Imbued with enthusiasm for life in all its aspects, the student at Juniata puts classroom theory into actual practice in club activities. The realization that interest can be effectively sustained only in a small, closely connected group has led to the student's participation in campus organizations. There, by virtue of common interests and enjoyment, a richer, more cultured life is produced. Contacts made here endure to be a memory to all students.

Organizations

representing the largest student organization on the campus, met every month in the homes of faculty advisors to formulate its plans. Early activities were the Big-Little Sister movement and the annual Christmas Bazaar, the proceeds of which were used to adopt Wendy Hoy, a war refugee.

Sunday evening programs, hymn sings, family worship, and the support of Vesper services were all contributions of the club. Culminating events of the year were Heart Sister Week, the Spring Banquet and the May Day Breakfast.

Scribimus Club, made up of the faithful few who treasured creative writing in spite of the many other activities of a crowded schedule, went on in its usual informal and spontaneous manner this year.

The group consisted almost entirely of new blood at the beginning of the season. Writing took the form of short stories, essays, sonnets—just anything that the spark of genius happened to inspire.

Scribimus prides itself in being the one club on the campus that is entirely informal. It is made up of only those who are actively interested and chooses just one officer each year to represent it in outer campus circles.

Le Cercle Francais dans la salle C, the favorite haunt of French students, affords lighthearted entertainment for all, intellectually and socially. Through the varied activities of this group, wobbly and immature diction is soon overcome with confidence. Quaint French songs and games, as well as newspapers and stories, transport one to the strange but pleasing land of French customs. Clever skits are sometimes dramatized for the group. Other times, spelling bees and cross word puzzles tax the vocabulary.

French tables in the college dining hall blend in with these activities. There "on parle francais s'il desire manger." Conversation is entered into freely in the French tongue while the food magically tastes of a French cuisine.

Library Staff members this year assumed added responsibility due to the unusual times and the lack of professional help. Miss Lillian M. Evans, the librarian, is on leave of absence in California. Under the guidance of Mrs. Kenneth L. Smoke, acting librarian, the student assistants received valuable training which may enable them to assume positions following graduation.

Members of this group are constantly serving the needs of the student — securing books from the stacks, open shelves, Museum, or the Browsing Room. Others work in the offices and with documents or periodicals.

Socially, there was time for monthly meetings and two big events, the annual Christmas party and a breakfast hike in May.

W. A. A. puts into practice its motto: "A sport for every girl and a girl in every sport." This year more emphasis was placed on coed sports than formerly. The Women's Athletic Association sponsored the women's athletic programs including basketball, volleyball, softball and hockey intramurals as well as the individual sports of ping pong, tennis and badminton. In addition, the organization planned hikes and inducted new members.

For membership each girl must participate in one major sport and one minor sport. Requirements were lowered this year to permit a more representative membership. Emblems and awards were given to those girls who had merited them throughout the year.

strives for better teachers in the elementary education profession both intellectually and socially. Emphasis on the "well-rounded" teacher finds expression in monthly meetings where discussions, usually led by authorities in the field, range from theory to practice. One meeting this year featured actual experiences related by a number of former graduates. They discussed freely the problems faced in actual practice and solutions which they found to be helpful. Members of the club are elementary education majors admitted in their sophomore year.

Lambda Gamma abided by a war-time schedule again this year, omitting a social program, and concentrating on service projects and education. In the fall, copies of "The Upper Room" were sent to all the Juniata men in the Armed Forces overseas. An additional project of bandage-rolling at the Red Cross Headquarters completed the service program.

Home Economics Day on the tenth of December was the main function of the year's work in Home Economics. Pace's "The World of Tomorrow" was the theme of the day. The presentation consisted of lectures, exhibits and demonstrations; the day was closed by a formal banquet held at the Penn Koffee Shoppe.

A restaurant after major campus activities, plus the license to operate a milk machine in the dormitory, were the concessions granted to the club this year.

I. R. C. sponsored by Dr. Herbert K. Zassenhaus, was active as a discussion group this year. The consideration of "American Foreign Policy and Post-War Reconstruction" was its over-all topic.

The largest project in which the club took part was the support of the Institute of International Relations which was held at Juniata, featuring Mr. Norman Thomas, Miss Dorothy Detzer, Mr. Hiram Motherwell, and Mr. V. T. Fong as speakers.

Since the aim of the club was to arouse interest in international relations, one of its important functions was bringing to the campus speakers who were authorities on that subject.

Captain Henry Eisenhart. "Hank" this year assisted Coach Oller and covered the center spot for the team. He was the highest scorer on the team and averaged 14.7 points per game. He was chosen as a member of the All-Star Tri-State Area basketball team.

Richard Wareham. "Dick," an invaluable player, ranked next to "Hank" in number of points scored, averaging 14.4 points per game and, against Westminster, setting a new record of 26 points in a J. C. basketball game. He received Honorable Mention on the Tri-State team.

Eugene Brumbaugh. "Gene" was one of this year's best defensive ball players. His six feet two inches proved a constant headache to the other teams under the banking boards. One of the hardest workers on the squad, he was always in there fighting.

William Hunt. This was "Bill's" only season of college ball, having played in previous years on intramural teams. His shots from the side of the court, his able defensive playing, plus the experience which he picked up through the year gave him a spot on the varsity.

Herbert Eisenhart. "Fuzz" held down one of the toughest jobs on the squad this year. He played "backguard," a thankless position which is mainly concerned with staying back on the defensive court and preventing the other team from breaking down the floor. He carried out his job very well, and had a very good season.

It is doubtful whether anyone could have forecast the success of this year's basketball squad by attending the first turnout of candidates who answered Coach Jack Oller's call for basketball players.

Four players remained from the squad of the previous year. Hank Eisenhart, the only member of the varsity of the previous year, was chosen to assist Coach Oller with his duties. The other boys who had some experience in a few of the games from last year were Fuzz Eisenhart, Dick Wareham and Gene Brumbaugh. From the intramural squads of the previous year came Bill Hunt, who was to occupy the fifth starting position, Jim Freeman, Bill Maclay, Sam Savadow, George Bridenbaugh, and Jack Liberatore. From the Freshman ranks came Dick Houpt, Bud Laing, and later in the year Earl Kaylor and John Carper.

The season opened with a win over Susquehanna 51-34. The next game began a losing streak of five games, as the Indians bowed to Mt. St. Mary's 37-31, Westminster 71-63, W & J 70-37, New Cumberland 43-29, and Indiantown Gap 44-38. The next encounter was close but the Indians nosed out Middletown Air Depot 52-51. A trip to the east brought losses to Mt. St. Mary's 69-35, St. Joseph's 62-42, and a win over Elizabethtown 69-51. Then came Christmas vacation, and the team took a rest.

In January the team pulled two surprises and West Virginia and Westminster were beaten by scores of 47-45 and 64-46, respectively. Elizabethtown was the next victim of the Indians by a score of 78-32, and Susquehanna fell by the score of 55-30. Penn State proved a little too strong and they won over J. C. 38-29.

Washington, D.C., was the scene of the next two Juniata victories. American University was decisively beaten 84-31, and Catholic University was on the short end of a 54-37 score. The season ended with a pair of games split between Ursinus and Juniata, the first going to the Indians 64-52, Ursinus winning the next 56-46. Indiantown won over Juniata again 49-47 in one of the best games ever played here. Middletown closed the season by winning the last game 65-37.

The season was long, hard, but successful. Many times the starting five had to play two or three games a week, and stay in for all four quarters. Many of the teams played were very big schools with service trainees, but the boys did an admirable job wherever they played. Juniata is proud of them!

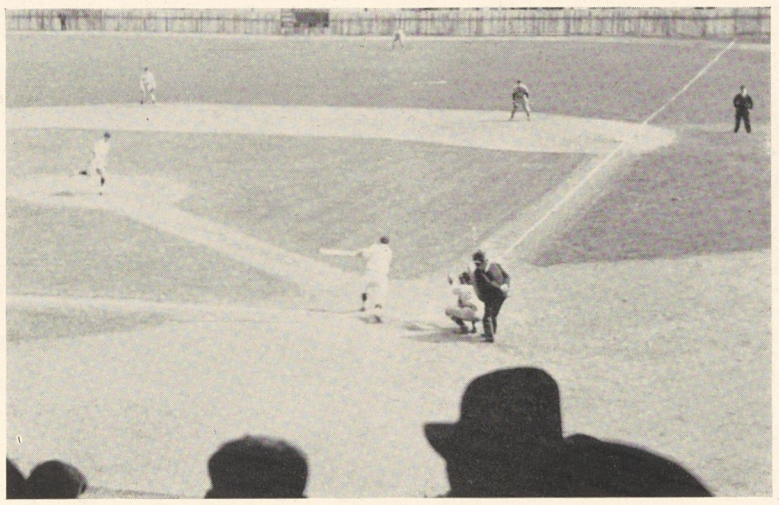
COACH KIRACOFE



Baseball

Spring means baseball, and Coach Edgar Kiracofe's call for candidates was answered by twenty-five men. After a few weeks of practice the team was ready for the opener with Bucknell. This game being rained out, the team journeyed to Penn State for the first game of the season. Squire Holsinger and Herb Frye pitched for the Indians, but the State College men got a lead in the first innings and held it all the way, finally winning 8-5. The men who played in this game actually played most of the season. Dick Wareham, a freshman, took the catcher's position. The infield was composed of either Ray Tesi or Fuzz Eisenhart at first, George Wineland at second, Chuck Bargerstock at short, and Bill Goelz at third. In the outfield were Captain Bob Querry, Maurice Quint, and Jack Lang.

The second game was the most sensational of the season. The University of Pittsburgh was the opponent, and the Panthers wasted no time in jumping to an 8-0 lead in three innings. As the Panthers came to bat in the fourth, Coach Kiracofe called Ray Tesi to the mound to stop the Panthers. Ray pitched seven innings of perfect baseball. As the Panthers began striking out, the Indians caught the inspiration to win and in the eighth inning five runs came over. In the ninth another run was scored and, with two men on base, Tesi smashed out a double to tie-up the score 8-8. The tenth inning produced no score. In the eleventh, Fuzz Eisenhart singled, George Wineland took first as the catcher tipped his bat, and Bill Goelz connected for a double, J. C. winning the game 9-8. Bucknell was the next opponent and they won 6-3 after losing 8-7 to Juniata. J. C. next played Elizabethtown with E-town taking the first of a four game series 8-7, and Juniata winning the rest 6-0, 11-0, and 9-1.

Five J. C. men batted over .300. Jack Lang was the big gun at the plate with .441, but Ray Tesi, Bill Goelz, Squire Holsinger, and Maurice Quint all were well over the .300 mark. The team averaged .269. As for pitching, Ray Tesi won one game and lost none; Squire Holsinger and Dick Frick won two out of three, and Herb Frye lost one.

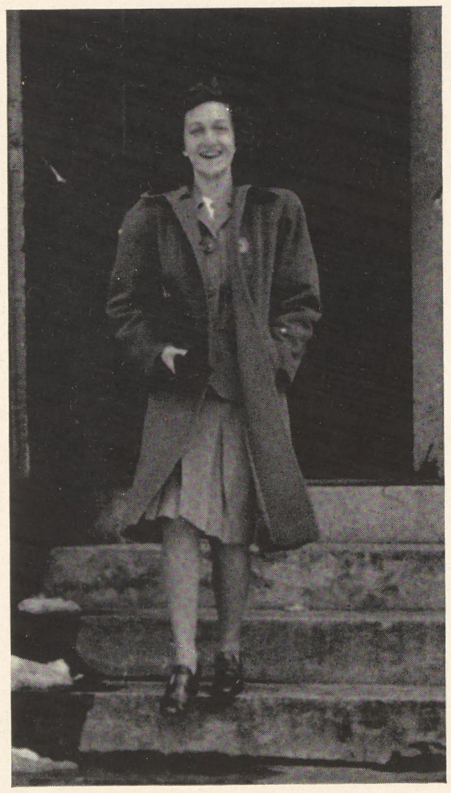
Intramurals



Keeping physically fit has been the goal toward which the women of Juniata strive in an effort to contribute their best in these war days. The athletic program is varied so that each coed can participate in the sport in which she is most interested and skilled.

The fall season was started with the usual enthusiasm for hockey. In addition, however, emphasis was placed on several minor sports in order that the girls would all be included. Tennis had a brief period of existence while the weather permitted and the courts were still in condition. Archery was, perhaps, the favorite of these individual sports, and every sunny afternoon found several female Robin Hoods enjoying rounds of shooting on the archery range. A mixed archery contest was an inter-period feature of the Homecoming hockey game.

With the bringing of sports indoors, volleyball and basketball became the center of attention. Four volleyball teams, composed of girls in each class, were organized and games were played in friendly competition two or three evenings a week. In addition, mixed teams of girls and fellows were formed to play in the preliminary games at the varsity basketball games. Women's basketball became prominent after the Christmas holidays. This time, four class teams were set up and enthusiasm was displayed by each class. The sophomores led in victories, but each team played hard and untiringly to keep up its class spirit.

The minor sports which dominated the winter season included ping-pong, badminton, paddle tennis and bowling. Individual tournamets were carried on in the first three of these, giving the girls the opportunity to chalk up hours for keeping physically fit. When spring came, bowling teams composed of girls and fellows were organized to play against each other in the town bowling center.

Spring also brought on the organization of class teams in mushball which enabled the girls to enjoy a good sport and the out-of-doors at the same time. Archery and tennis were again emphasized with a larger season of participation. The ever popular tournaments constituted the program for these individual activities.

In spite of the accelerated program in which most students are involved, sports are still appealing and hold an important place on the campus calendar.

One of the most popular seasons of sport in the year is fall when all feminine hockey enthusiasts spend much of their free time on the hockey field. This year class teams were organized and games were played several afternoons of each week. The juniors were victorious in the competition, losing no games and tying one.

There were two games that highlighted the past hockey season. The traditional Homecoming Day game between the freshmen lassies and the sophomore coeds saw the sophomores carry off the honors in the true custom of the class.

The other game took place at the Shippensburg State Teachers College. The hockey team, composed of girls from each class team, returned victorious. This team represented Juniata in a Play Day sponsored by S. S. T. C. Miss Margaret Lindsey accompanied the team.

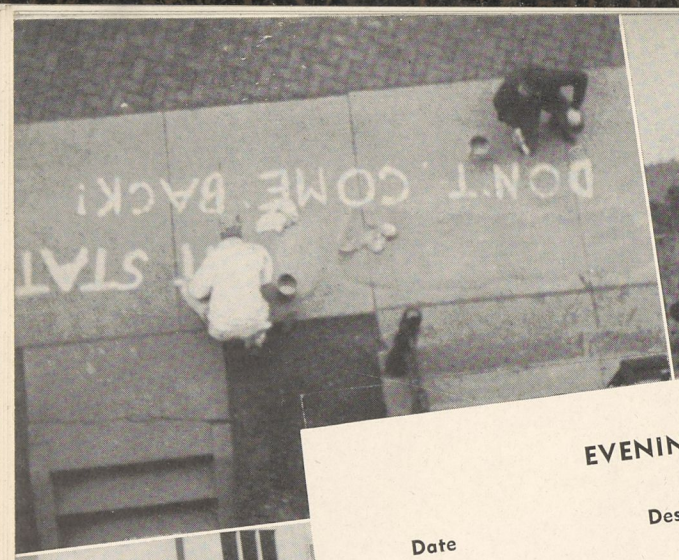
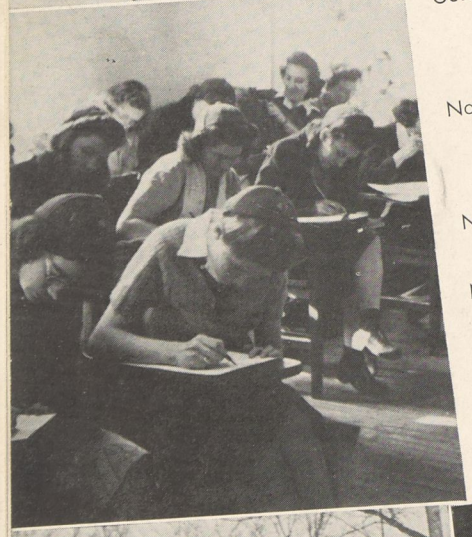
Every week, every month brings new and different activities to the Juniata College campus. A backward glance at the famed signing out sheet will give us an idea of the varied program of the past year. Every field—politics, music, and drama—has had a chance for self-expression. Nothing has been lacking in the extra curricular activities to help make the student a well-rounded personality.

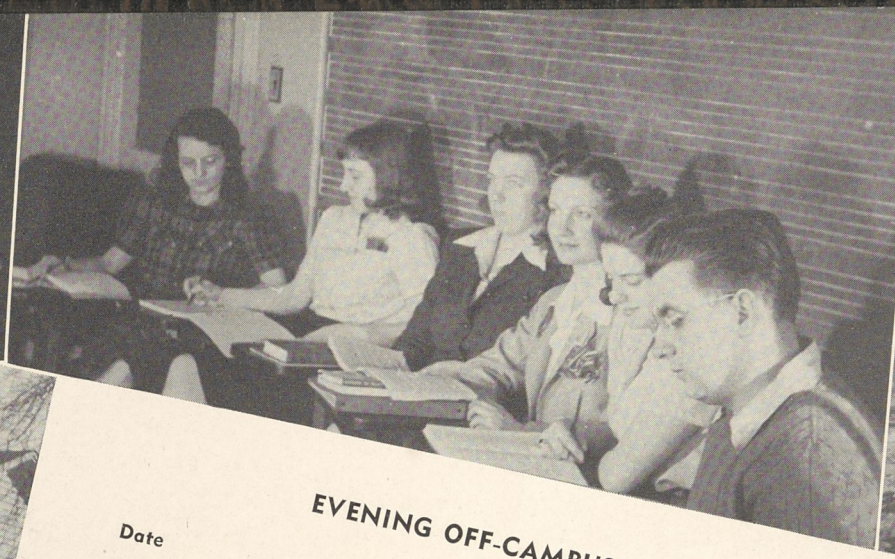
Calendar

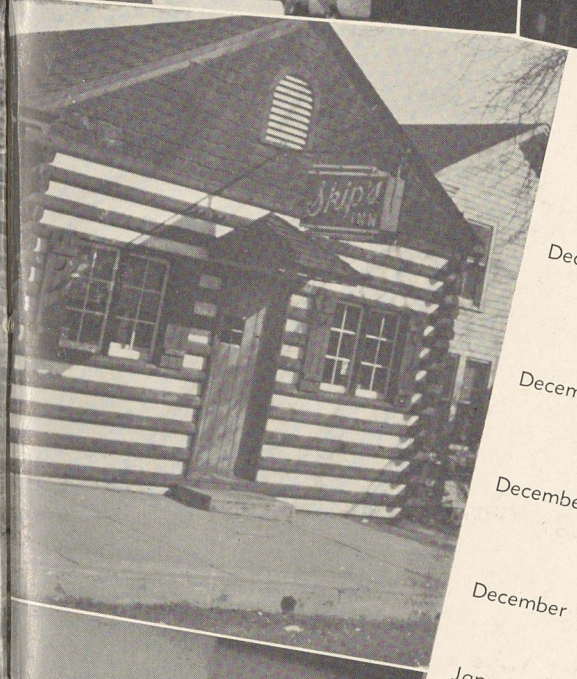


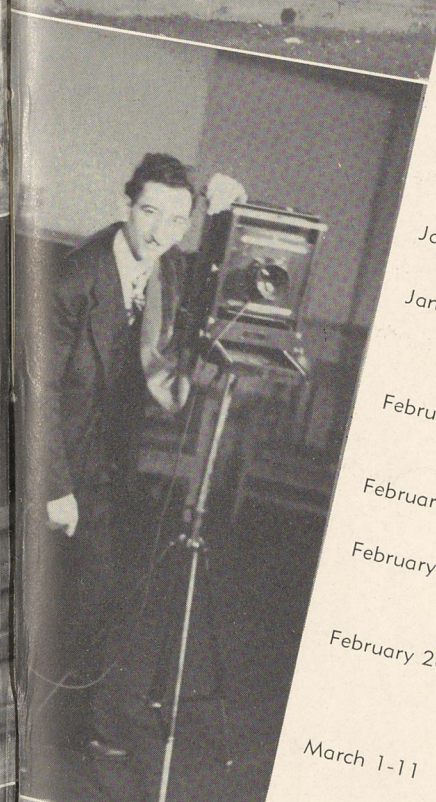


EVENING OFF-CAMPUS CARD

Date	Destination	Description
September 24-26	Freshman Week — or is it "weak"?	The time when freshmen get acquainted with Juniata, and visa versa. They came—they saw—
October 2	Faculty Reception	Down the Assembly Line, faculty in mass introduction.
October 6	Mountain Day	What do you do in the Infantry? You march, you march, you march. Mountain Day at J. C. was established on the same general idea—even to the beans at the end.
October 9	Moonlight Hike	Longest way 'round is the shortest way home.
October 23	A nervous breakdown for all concerned. This is Homecoming!	What a busy day! Inauguration in the morning . . . games in the afternoon . . . the Curtis String Quartet in the evening . . . and a headache at least half the night.
October 30	Hallowe'en Party	Ghosts, spooks, and Frank Sinatra, too.
October 31	Fire Lighting Service	Introducing freshmen to tradition . . . Indian maidens haunt social rooms in full regalia.
November 13	Senior Party	Now is the time for all good seniors to come to the aid of their party.
November 20	Susquehanna Basketball Game	Wheee!—we won!
November 25	Thanksgiving Banquet	Orchids to Miss Mathias — it was swell.
November 30	Alfarata Pictures	Drama—Herman arrived . . . we donned our Sunday best . . . lined up . . . he shot us.

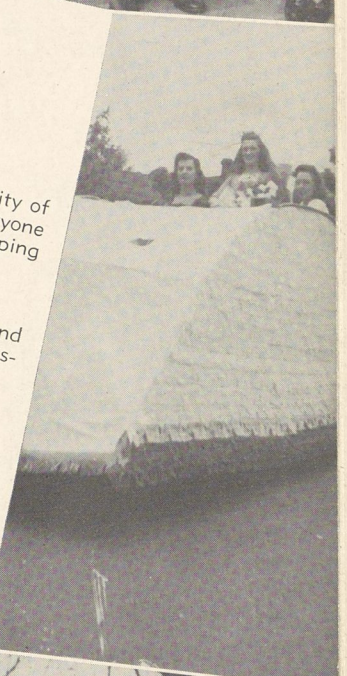


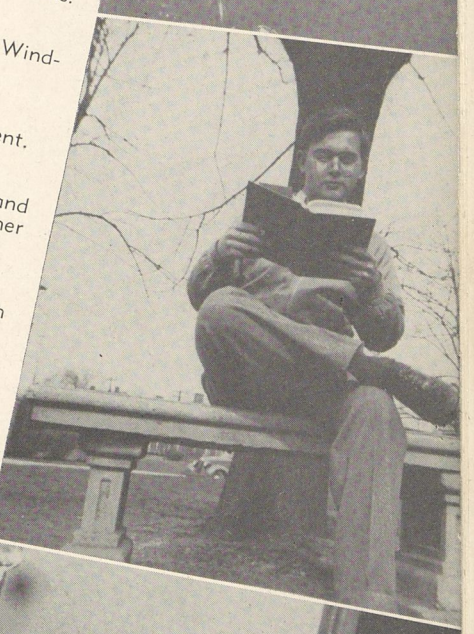


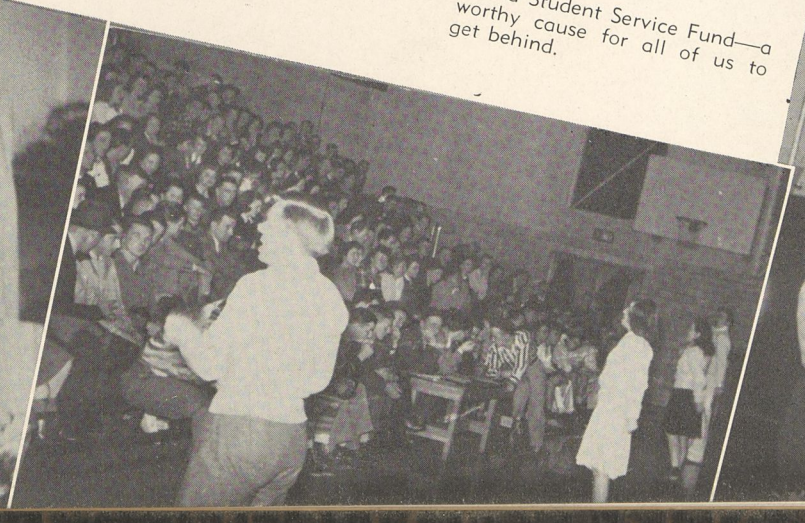


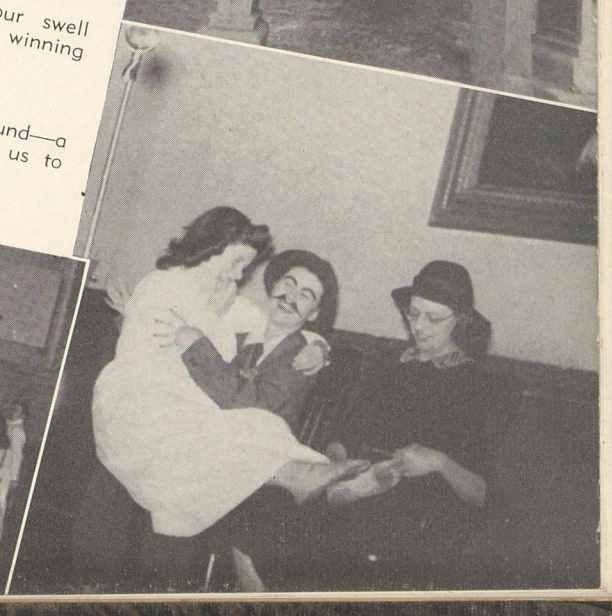
EVENING OFF-CAMPUS CARD

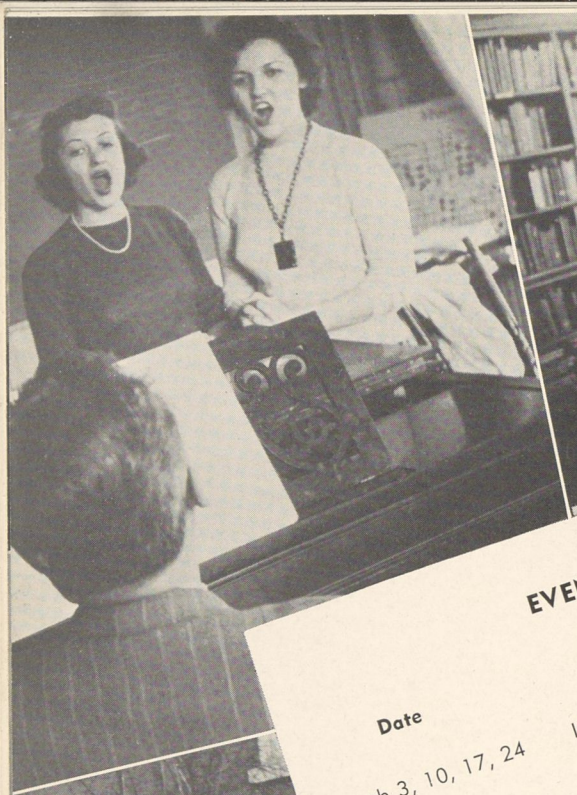
Date	Destination	Description
December 4	Y. W. C. A. Bazaar	The yearly Christmas activity of the Y. W. at which everyone can do his Christmas shopping early.
December 10	Home Economics Day	Reign of the rolling pin and sewing machine. Exhibition, visitors, lectures.
December 14-16	Christmas Activities	Carols in the morning and Dr. Ellis "Christmas Carol"ing in the evening.
December 18-Jan. 3	Who knows and who cares?	Christmas vacation—the pause that refreshes and refleshes.
January 8	A. B. C. Party	Childhood was never like this.
January 13	Nine O'Clock Opera Co.	Those "Merry Wives of Windsor."
January 23	The Bitter World	Mid-semester Commencement.
January 27	Penn State Game	It was a swell fight Mom and ya should have seen the other team.
February 7-14	Heart Sister Week	Secrets, mystery and so much attention.
February 10	D-Day	Our chance to back the attack.
February 16	Valentine Formal	Hearts, flowers and singing telegrams.
February 26	Stunt Night	Lots of work for four swell stunts with the juniors winning the cup.
March 1-11	$400 Goal	World Student Service Fund—a worthy cause for all of us to get behind.

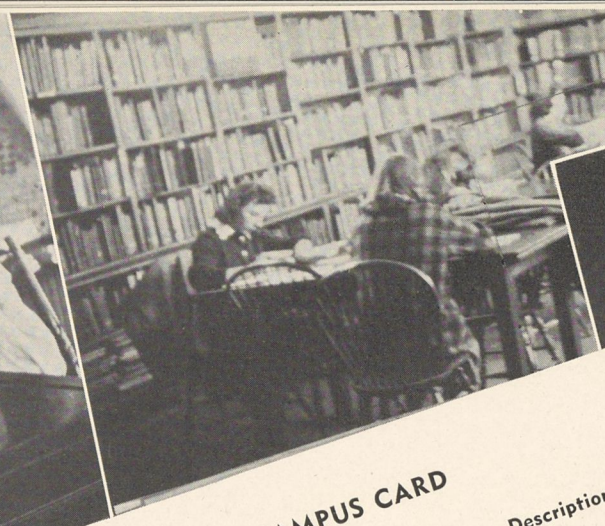












EVENING OFF-CAMPUS CARD

Date	Destination	Description
March 3, 10, 17, 24	Institute of Understanding	A series of lectures for those who want to think—and have time to.
March 18	Sophomore Party	We'll ne'er forget though far we go—those good old school days. Ricketts' disciplinary problems.
March 27-31	Spiritual Empasis Week	Rev. Robinson lending a helping hand to all of us.
March 27	Leonard Warren's Concert	Personality plus — a wonderful voice.
April 1-10	? ? ?	Ah! Vacation.
April 18	Stringfellow Barr's Speech	A mind sensation, to say the least.
April 18	Move-up Day	A solemn occasion . . . new officers . . . new responsibilities.
April 19	Y. W. C. A. Banquet	No man-power shortage as far as waiters were concerned.
April 22	Freshman Party	More fun for all under the big top.
April 24-May 6	Comprehensives	Ugh! Please pass the aspirin—or morphine or something! On second thought, please pass!
May 13	May Day	The annual celebration with the campus full of past and present May Day beauties!
May 28	Baccalaureate	A solemn tradition to which all of us look forward.
May 29	Commencement	It's only the beginning, folks, only the beginning.

Dearest Alberta,

Honest kid, I think "yours" is swell. We really have had millions of fun together this year. Remember back we sat down in 1630 trying to pound Symphonic into our heads? Remember those "Psychological rest periods" every other record? Remember the day we made records, ourselves, at which lesson? There are hundreds of things we can remember about the fun we had together in our freshman year.

So here's wishing the very best of every thing to a wonderful friend and an excellent organist.

Love,

Kaye.

Dearest "Alberti" —

Gee whiz — how time flies! 'Member the first time we did "Oh Dry Those Tears" — Millions of years has passed since then, huh? — But those memories will last, "Alberti" and I can look back on those times I sang in the stone church as some of the happiest times I have spent at Juanita. Those times when you so sweetly put up with my mistakes and just kept smiling and going over it with me. Thanks a million, how, really appreciated it.

Love + Lots wishing you Lots of luck,

Just Jo.
